Canadian Work and/or Immigration Information

Our Canadian Immigration attorneys need the information below to help determine the visa program(s) best for you. Fortunately, Canada has several work and immigration visa programs to assist the holder of a U.S. non-Immigration visa from having to return to their country of origin or citizenship. By taking a Canadian work or immigration, the applicant gains residency and the ability to legally work in Canada. When the United States again has an immigration program, the applicant may return to the United States on a visitor or tourist visa, if they have this U.S. visa, and apply for work and then adjust the status of their U.S. visitor or tourist visa to a U.S. work or immigration visa with the new U.S. employer's assistance.
